The Town That Fooled The British

St. Michaels derived its name from the Episcopal Parish established here in 1677, which was named after St. Michael the Archangel. Both the river and the town were officially reformed to St. Michaels although in 1675 William Hamblin of Marlborough named the river "Myles" in his will.

One of the first land grants given in 1644 was "The Beach", a fifty acre tract covering the present harbor men of St. Michaels. These grants quickly followed "Shaper", fifty acres, patented in 1667 by Christopher Shaper, ran from the Miles River to what is now called Back Creek (San Domingo Creek). In 1675, "Levantage" was granted, the present site of Perry Cabin Farm.

The immediate clearing of dense woods created two major industries - the growing of tobacco and the building of ships. The St. Michaels Episcopal Church attracted some sailors, but it was not until just prior to the revolution that an active growth of the town began.

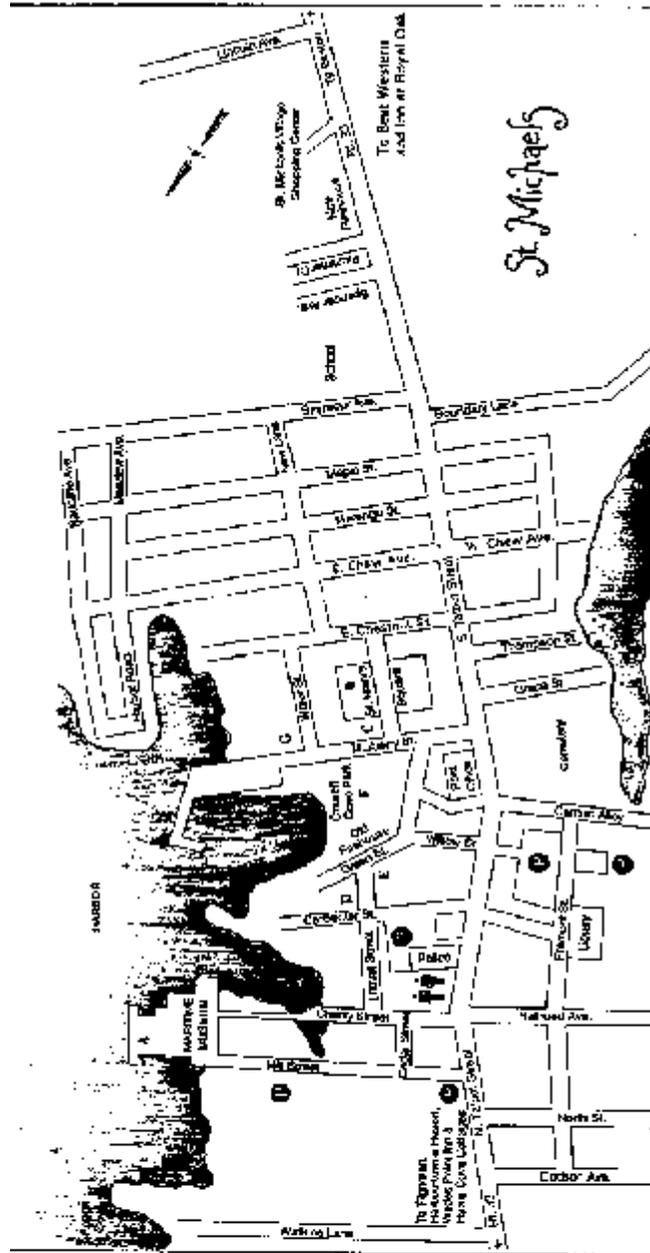

During that time and the war of 1812, St. Michaels was an important shipbuilding center of privates, blockade runners and naval supplies. This activity caused an attempt by British naval forces to destroy the shipyards and the boats under construction.

On the morning of August 10, 1813, a number of British frigates, armed by cannon, shelled the town and attacked a fort on the harbor side. Residents, forewarned, had hidden barrels in the masts of ships and in the tops of the trees causing the cannons to overlook the town. This first "sketch" was effective and only one house was smacked. It is known as the "Cannons House". St. Michaels is now known as "The Town That Fooled The British".

Incorporated in 1804 and renamed, the town was laid out in three squares - Hammon's Square to the north, Thompson's Square to the west and Broadbark's Square to the east. The focal point of the town was designated as St. Mary's Square, an area where churches, schools and a town market were established.

During the years that followed, St. Michaels continued as a boatbuilding center along with the harvest and processing of crabs and shellfish. Seawrights carried farm products and seafood to Annapolis and Baltimore. With the coming of the railroad in 1881, "boardinghouse" visitors arrived both by land and sea.

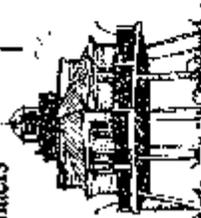

Since 1963 when St. Michaels celebrated its Sesquicentennial of the "Battle with the British", it has been "rediscovered". The town offers a quiet charm and a safe, peaceful haven for a day, weekend or vacation to visit the historic streets and museums, fine restaurants and interesting shops and to the ambience, making St. Michaels a visitor's delight.

Historic Sites of St. Michaels

A. HOOPER STRAIT LIGHTHOUSE.

Built in 1879, this cottage-style, screw-pile lighthouse - one of only three remaining - is typical of lighthouses that once lined the Bay. Fully restored and with its light still flashing, you can tour the three-story lighthouse at the Chesapeake Bay Maritime Museum.

B. ST. MARY'S SQUARE MUSEUM.

Circa 1800, originally part of a steam and grist mill. The "Trottingham" building, named because of its resemblance to the top of the same name serves as a display area. Museum open May through October. Sunday and Sunday. Other days by arrangement. Donations appreciated.

C. CANNONBALL HOUSE - Circa 1805.

During the War of 1812, a cannonball penetrated the roof, rolled across the attic and down the staircase, igniting Mrs. Merwin as she carried her infant daughter downstairs.

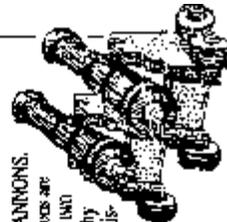

D. HELL'S CROSSING. These streets are curiously called Loxox and Carpenter, but where they cross each other, they long ago earned the name of "Hell's Crossing." The noisy shipyards along with the sounding of the fire and fog bell created such a "din" that the street was also nicknamed "Racket Alley."

E. THE BRUFF HOUSE. This "weathers manne" style house stands on land sold to John Huff in 1791 for 20 pounds. Restored in 1970, this is one of the oldest homes in St. Michaels.

F. THE CANNONS.

These cannons are replicas of the two given to the town of St. Michaels in 1813 by Jacob Gibson as a peace offering after a mischievous prank. The originals were confiscated by Federal troops from the Arsenal in Nassau at the beginning of the "War Between the States."

G. THE COTTAGE. Original home of skipper Robert Lambdin and his descendants for generations.
